

The Dr Elsie Inglis-Scottish Women's Hospitals' Trust Medal and Prize

for all undergraduates or those recently graduated

23rd November 2017 Edinburgh

Competition: To continue the ethos of Edinburgh surgeon Elsie Inglis (1864-1917), icon of social and war medicine and her WW1 women volunteers, Edinburgh's Scottish Women's Hospitals and to raise awareness of these globally eulogised yet largely 'forgotten' WW1 women who received neither British Government recognition nor retrospective honours: we have established an annual Dr Elsie Inglis-Scottish Women's Hospitals' Trust Medal & Prize (cheque for £200) in the centenary year of Inglis' death.

Applicants: Are invited, for this newly instigated annual medal and prize, to submit an essay of up to 3,000 words in length with the title below (any references cited would not be included in the word count).

Title: Apart from remembering the actions and initiatives of Dr Inglis and her 'Angels', from WW1, I can see parallels (as outlined by Ian McFarlane) with today's Volunteers who serve on operations particularly in Afghanistan.... Major General David Shaw GOC Scotland July 2010

Submission: Documents must be submitted in pdf by Wednesday 1st November 2017 at 13.00hrs to the following e-mail address: elsieminglis@gmail.com

Ceremony: The Medal & Award Ceremony will take place in Edinburgh on the 23rd November 2017

The organisers reserve the right not to award if no work of suitable standard is received.
